Sutherland's Theory of Differential Association

Introduction

The Theory of Differential Association was given by Edwin Sutherland. This theory explains that criminal and deviant behaviour is learned from other people through social interaction.

According to this theory, a person becomes criminal not by birth, but by learning from family, friends, and groups.

Meaning of Differential Association Theory

The theory says that people learn criminal behaviour by associating with others who already engage in crime or deviant activities.

In simple words, “bad company leads to bad behaviour.”

Main Ideas of the Theory

1. Crime is Learned

A person is not born criminal. Criminal behaviour is learned from society.

Example:

A child may learn stealing from criminal friends.

2. Learning Takes Place Through Interaction

People learn crime by talking and spending time with others.

Example:

Teenagers may learn smoking or drug use from friends.

3. Family and Friends Influence Behaviour

Close groups like family and peer groups strongly affect behaviour.

4. People Learn Techniques of Crime

A person learns methods, skills, and ideas related to crime.

Example:

A hacker may learn cyber crime from online groups.

5. Excess of Bad Influence Leads to Crime

If a person spends more time with criminals than good people, the chances of becoming criminal increase.

Examples of Differential Association

- A student learns cheating from classmates.
 - Youth learn drug addiction from friends.
 - Gang members teach criminal activities to new members.

Importance of the Theory

1. Explains how crime develops in society

2. Shows the importance of social environment
 3. Helps in preventing crime through good education and company

Criticism of the Theory

- It does not explain crimes committed alone.
 - Some people stay with criminals but do not become criminals.
 - It ignores biological and mental factors.

Conclusion

Sutherland's Theory of Differential Association explains that criminal behaviour is learned through interaction with others. Family, friends, and social groups play an important role in shaping behaviour. Good environment and positive company can help prevent crime in society.

Hindu Philosophical Ideas and Social Inequality in India

Introduction

Hindu philosophy is one of the oldest philosophies in the world. It teaches ideas about duty, morality, truth, karma, dharma, and spiritual life. Hindu philosophy has greatly influenced Indian society and culture.

Some Hindu philosophical ideas helped maintain social order and moral values, but some ideas were also used to justify social inequality, especially the caste system. Therefore, Hindu philosophy both reinforced and challenged inequality in India.

Meaning of Social Inequality

Social inequality means unequal treatment of people on the basis of caste, class, gender, religion, or economic condition.

In Indian society, caste inequality became one of the major forms of social inequality.

Hindu Philosophical Ideas that Reinforced Social Inequality

1. Varna System

The Varna system divided society into four groups:

- Brahmins – priests and teachers
- Kshatriyas – rulers and warriors
- Vaishyas – traders and businessmen
- Shudras – servants and workers

This division later became rigid and created caste inequality.

People of lower castes faced discrimination and were denied equal rights.

2. Concept of Karma

According to Hindu philosophy, a person's present life depends on actions performed in previous births.

Many people believed that lower caste people suffered because of bad karma from past lives.

This idea sometimes discouraged people from questioning inequality.

3. Concept of Dharma

Dharma means duty. People were expected to perform duties according to their caste.

This strengthened the caste system because people were told to accept their social position.

4. Untouchability

Some traditional beliefs treated certain groups as “untouchables.” They were socially excluded and denied respect and opportunities.

This increased social inequality in society.

Hindu Philosophical Ideas that Challenged Social Inequality

1. Belief in Equality of Soul

Hindu philosophy teaches that all human beings have the same soul (Atman).

This idea supports spiritual equality among all people.

2. Teachings of Bhakti Movement

Saints of the Bhakti movement opposed caste discrimination and taught equality, love, and devotion to God.

Examples:

Kabir, Guru Nanak, and Ravidas criticized caste discrimination.

They believed all people are equal before God.

3. Idea of Ahimsa and Compassion

Hindu philosophy teaches non-violence, kindness, and compassion toward all living beings.

These values support justice and human dignity.

4. Reform Movements

Many Hindu reformers worked against social inequality.

Examples:

Swami Vivekananda supported human equality and social service.

Raja Ram Mohan Roy fought against social evils like sati and discrimination.

Critical Evaluation

Hindu philosophy has both positive and negative effects on Indian society.

Positive Side

- Promoted morality and spirituality
- Encouraged compassion and equality of soul
- Inspired social reform movements

Negative Side

- Varna and caste system created discrimination
- Karma theory was sometimes used to justify inequality
- Lower castes suffered social exclusion

Many inequalities were created more by social practices than by spiritual teachings themselves.

Modern India follows constitutional equality and rejects caste discrimination.

Conclusion

Hindu philosophical ideas played an important role in shaping Indian society. Some ideas reinforced social inequality through caste and varna systems, while other ideas challenged inequality by teaching equality, compassion, and spiritual unity. Therefore, Hindu philosophy has both supported and opposed social inequality in different ways.
